Jessica Zeff on Preparing for a Government Audit [Podcast]

By The Compliance & Ethics Blog on Tuesday, May 14, 2024.

Jessica Zeff loves government audits. I know, it's hard to believe, given the dread they inspire. But, the founder and lead consultant of Simply Compliance makes a very good case in this podcast that audits can be much better than people expect and actually helpful for the compliance program.

U.S. Departments of Health & Human Services and Justice Issue Letter of Findings to State of Rhode Island Over Improper Over-Hospitalizations of Children with Disabilities

By HHS News releases on Monday, May 13, 2024.

An investigation by the United States Department of Health and Human Services Office for Civil Rights and the United States Attorney's Office for the District of Rhode Island and has found that the State of Rhode Island violated federal civil rights laws by routinely and unnecessarily segregating children with mental health and/or developmental disabilities at Bradley Hospital, an acute-care psychiatric hospital.
